

HANDWRITING PROGRAM at UNIVERSAL PUBLIC SCHOOL

UNIVERSAL uses Handwriting as an easy, step-by-step approach to teach handwriting. Continuous-stroke, vertical manuscript reinforces reading development.

Writing enables communication through the recording of messages. By using the conventions of written language, the writer records ideas and messages in a text that can be read by others. Recording involves learners in handwriting and keyboarding while using their knowledge of writing conventions.

Learners bring their own knowledge and experiences about handwriting and its value to the educational setting but they need further explicit experiences that will enable them to develop understanding about the knowledge, attitudes and skills and abilities involved in developing their handwriting.
